THE COMMUNITY

Pend Oreille County, located in the northeastern corner of Washington State, shares its borders with Idaho and Canada. With a population of approximately 13,600 residents, the county is renowned for its old-growth trees and abundant wildlife, including elk, white-tailed deer, moose, bobcats, bears, and numerous bird species. Outdoor enthusiasts can enjoy activities such as hiking, camping, fishing, and wildlife viewing in areas like the 440-acre Pend Oreille County Park. In addition, the Pend Oreille River, one of the few northward-flowing rivers in North America, offers opportunities for boating, fishing, and paddling along the 70-mile Pend Oreille River Water Trail. This trail provides access to environmental and historical points of interest, picnic spots, and campsites, making it ideal for family and fresh air activities.

The county's name originates from French trappers' description of the ear pendants worn by local Indigenous tribes. Today, the Kalispel Tribe maintains a 4,557-acre reservation within the county, preserving its rich Native American heritage. History enthusiasts can explore old mines, logging camps, pioneer homes, and historical buildings throughout the area.

Pend Oreille County's economy has traditionally been based on natural resource extraction, particularly zinc and lead mining. In recent years, the County has attracted manufacturing industries, drawn by its abundant, inexpensive hydroelectric power and the appeal of rural living.

THE COUNTY

Created in 1911, Pend Oreille was the last county created in the state. The current population is nearly 15,000. Newport, with a population of 2,276, is the largest town in the County and is the county seat. The Board of County Commissioners serve as the County's legislative authority and as the chief administrators for county operations. The three Commissioners are elected to four-year terms. The Board adopts and oversees the budget and oversees departments not under another elected official such as Public Works, Community Development, Counseling Services, Human Resources, and Information Technology Services.

THE DEPARTMENT & POSITION

The Pend Oreille County Counseling Services (POCCS) department is dedicated to fostering hope, healing, and resilience by providing accessible, compassionate behavioral healthcare that honors individual dignity and cultural values while empowering community members to achieve wellness goals. Services and programs provided by the department's 31 FTEs include Outpatient Mental Health Services, Intensive Outpatient Substance Use Treatment Services, the WISe Program, the Recovery Navigator Program, the Prevention Program, and Crisis Services. These programs provide comprehensive outpatient mental health and substance use services for adults and children, individual and group counseling, school based and community-based counseling, and peer counseling. POCCS has a highly trained staff, well-developed internship program, and is actively expanding group, family, and children's services.

Reporting to the Director of Counseling Services, the Clinical Director oversees the department's Substance Use and Mental Health Programs, ensuring compliance with regulations and contractual requirements. This role includes providing direct mental health and substance abuse services such as intakes, assessments, therapy, crisis intervention, and case management. The Clinical Director recruits, hires, evaluates, and develops staff, ensuring proper credentialing and training. They provide individual and group supervision, develop clinical practice protocols, and foster teamwork. Collaborating with the public and employees, the Clinical Director plays a key role in delivering high-quality services that meet the community's needs.
